

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

Aneurysm survivor shares “Slices of life” through Art

In 2007, on the heels of a dramatic recovery from a brain aneurysm, Nadine Levin turned her part-time profession, photography, into a fulltime business. “Poolesville, Maryland – November 15, 2008 - Nadine Levin captures moments in time through the medium of photography.” This event ushered in over 20 years of her focusing on landscapes, beachscapes, animals, and nature.

She calls moments captured by this focus ‘slices of life’. These moments are the beautiful images one sees everyday in the environment that may be passed over on the way to the next destination. During her recovery, she began to notice these images – the lighting in the morning, flowers by the road, animals going about the day. All these images inspired her newfound appreciation for the beauty that surrounds each person everyday.

Travel Lady Magazine recently published an article, “How to Photograph Wildlife Like a Pro”, by Nadine. Here she shares some of her secrets for taking good photographs. One can find a few more tips by Nadine on:

She is also the author of The 21st Century Cowboy: A Photographic Look at Cowboys over the Last Hundred Years, and the owner of Maryland-based ‘Photography by Nadine’.

Nadine is available for personal commissions. When working with clients, she visits them for consultation. She creates for them fine art prints, personalized images and custom photographs at competitive prices. She already has supplied her artwork both for a high profile hospital wing in Westchester, NY and for the new wing of the New York Methodist Hospital for Eating Disorders.

Her work is available to both consumers and wholesale customers. Her most recent venture is home décor targeted to western, southwestern, rustic and lodge themes. She sells in the US and Canadian marketplace and online at her new website <http://thewesternhome.com>. Information can be found here on discount offers and promotions, subscriptions to her blog, and social media accounts. Nadine’s studio is open by appointment and shopping is available 24x7 at <http://thewesternhome.com>.
